Corina Gilbert is the creative director at the Foundation for Government Accountability, where she uses graphic design to enhance FGA’s branding and creatively tell the stories of individuals succeeding through work.

Prior to joining FGA, Corina owned her own graphic design company and served as advertising manager at Northern Mattress and Furniture. She holds a Bachelor of Science in Economics from the University of Maine at Farmington.

Corina first experienced the value of a job while working in a pizza shop. She highly values her ability to provide for herself and her family through work, and her passion for work’s ability to provide choice fuels her day-to-day at FGA.

Corina loves clean, effective, concise, and consistent design. She can often be found cycling, running, and cooking healthy meals for her family in Norridgewock, Maine.

FGA’s mission aligns with my personal beliefs and convictions. It is immensely rewarding to work for an organization that values the contribution of each of its unique team members and utilizes their talents to foster real, positive change for our society.
