Why does
James
love FGA?

FGA is unique because it has real, substantive successes to back up its reputation as a top-tier organization. I'm thrilled to be a part of an organization that achieves lasting change past the current election cycle.

James Miller is the digital marketing director at the Foundation for Government Accountability, where he manages the organization's digital platforms and is responsible for expanding its digital outreach

Prior to joining FGA, James served as a content marketer at Intermarkets and as the senior marketing manager at the Bill of Rights Institute. He holds a Bachelor of Science in Public Administration from Shippensburg University.

James first experienced the value of work while working at a taco stand at an amusement park. The dignity of being able to provide for his family and contributing to his community drives his day-to-day work at FGA and his role as a volunteer for Clarendon United Methodist Church.

A fan of politics, literature, and the New England Patriots, James currently resides in Arlington, VA with his wife and daughter.
