

Wisconsin State Representative Warren Petryk on getting people reemployed

Wisconsin State Representative Warren Petryk chose a career in public service because he likes to help people. Now, he's helping people get back to work in Wisconsin.

Here, Rep. Petryk discusses the need to shift focus from unemployment, which often has a negative connotation, to reemployment. He argues the main goal of unemployment insurance programs is getting people back to work. Prioritizing reemployment helps individuals receiving unemployment benefits find work quicker, grows the economy, and gives people a sense of satisfaction.

“People don’t want help; they want a job... they really want to be satisfied by getting up in the morning and fulfilling their dreams, not just getting a check.”

—WARREN PETRYK

Learn more about our workforce reforms at TheFGA.org/workforce-reforms.

Watch the full interview at:
TheFGA.org/videos

