Rep. Mike Gallagher: The Promising Pathway Act means patient access to cutting-edge treatments

The FDA's usual drug approval process takes an average of 10 to 12 years. But thousands of terminally ill Americans do not have the luxury of time—they need access to promising treatments as soon as possible.

That's why Representative Mike Gallagher (WI) introduced the Promising Pathway Act (PPA). Here, he discusses the need to rethink the FDA's current process, which he says doesn't go far enough for many patients.

“There are still thousands of Americans who aren't getting access to innovative, cutting-edge treatments that they need. That's what Promising Pathways is all about.”
