Why does Gregg love FGA?

“FGA has the right people, policy, and culture to succeed in freeing millions from government dependency.”

Gregg Pfister is the senior director of state affairs at the Foundation for Government Accountability.

Prior to joining FGA, Gregg served as a legislative aid in the Missouri House of Representatives. He holds a Bachelor of Science in Government and History from Evangel University and a Master of Arts in History from Southwestern Assemblies of God University.

Gregg first experienced the value of work while working as a dishwasher and busboy at a local restaurant. Gregg believes in the power of work to provide purpose and self-respect and hopes to enable more individuals to experience those benefits through his work at FGA. Gregg has testified before several state legislative committees.

Gregg, his wife, and their four children live in Missouri.
