Why does Tyler love FGA?

"I am motivated to be part of the FGA team because of meaningful relationships with many staff, a deep connection of professional and personal principles, and FGA's business efficacy and winning culture."

Tyler Lamensky is the research project manager at the Foundation for Government Accountability (FGA).

Prior to joining FGA, Tyler was a business analyst and development strategist for Phoenix Data Corporation. He also held several positions serving the State of Maine—IT project consultant for the Office of Information Technology, project manager for strategic initiatives for the Department of Health and Human Services - Commissioner's Office, and the acting director of boards and commissions for the Office of Governor Paul R. LePage. He holds a B.S. in Psychology and Philosophy from Millikin University.

Tyler first experienced the value of work mowing lawns. To him, work means empowering individuals to reach great accomplishments and grow into their better, self-sufficient selves.

When he's not working, he spends his time as volunteer team lead at Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church. He also enjoys running, hiking, and camping with his German Shepherd, Thor. A fan of the Green Bay Packers, the Milwaukee Bucks, and the Milwaukee Brewers, Tyler and his wife live in Indianapolis, Indiana.
