

Gasoline prices are killing us: Matt Muller, LeSage Natural

LeSage Natural sales manager, Matt Muller, is seeing the effects of high gas prices and inflation daily. The company, part of Green Acres Regional Center, Inc., is the only non-profit water bottling business hiring people with developmental disabilities. But soaring fuel costs and higher prices for supplies are making running the business increasingly more difficult.

Here, Matt Muller discusses how high fuel costs are making it more difficult for the non-profit to achieve their goal of creating jobs for people with disabilities—and how lower gas prices would help the organization immensely.

“Gasoline prices are killing us... We sell more bottles; we buy more gasoline... so how many more bottles do we have to sell to cover that increase?”

—MATT MULLER

Learn more about reforms to decrease inflation at TheFGA.org.

Watch the full interview at:
TheFGA.org/videos

