

RAY FERTIG

COMMERCIAL CONTRACTOR

Regulating the American Dream to Death in Wyoming

Ray Fertig has been a general contractor in Cheyenne, Wyoming, for the past 47 years. In that time, he's watched the homebuilding industry change from an industry that built good places to live at affordable prices to a field choked by burdensome regulations.

What used to be a straightforward process—building a home—now requires two or three attorneys, a stack of paperwork five feet tall, and years of waiting. If we don't fight back and take on excessive regulations, the American Dream could be priced out of reality for everyday Americans.

"They seem to never get rid of [regulations], they just keep adding another layer. It feels like it penalizes the ones of us that are trying to play by the rules, and it just keeps adding more and more layers of cost."

—RAY FERTIG

To learn more about how FGA is leading the fight against excessive government regulations, visit TheFGA.org/solution/limited-government.

Watch the full interview at:
TheFGA.org/videos

