Allen Cambon is a State Government Affairs Director at the Foundation for Government Accountability.

Prior to joining FGA, he was a senior policy advisor for South Dakota Governor Kristi Noem. He also previously worked as a legislative director for U.S. Congressman Ralph Abraham and in various other staff roles in Congress. He holds a Bachelor of Arts in History from Louisiana State University.

Allen first experienced the value of work while working on his uncle's farm and as a delivery driver for a local florist. Allen believes that government barriers to work are an attack on freedom. Allen has testified before legislative committees in the South Dakota Legislature.

When he's not working, Allen loves to spend time outdoors, fish, watch college sports, and eat good food. Allen, his wife Emily, and their two sons live in Forsyth, Georgia.
