Why does
Jacob
love FGA?

"One of the reasons I love working for FGA is that every project we undertake has a direct impact on everyday people, making a tangible difference in their lives."

Jacob Filer is the Web Developer for the Foundation for Government Accountability.

Jacob attended Belmont University and worked as a software developer for non-profits before coming to FGA.

Jacob first discovered the value of work while working for his grandpa on the family farm and selling sweet corn out of the bed of a pickup truck with his brother in the summers.

Jacob lives outside Nashville, Tennessee, with his bride and two boys.
