Why does Tim love FGA?

"FGA is an indispensable resource in stopping government programs and intervention from getting in the way of people pursuing their American Dream."

Tim Puglisi is an Associate Fellow at the Foundation for Government Accountability.

Prior to joining FGA, he was a Data Acquisition Coordinator at the Data Trust. He holds a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science and Managerial Economics from the University of Massachusetts Amherst.

Tim first experienced the value of work while working at a dress shop, where he learned invaluable lessons about hard work, integrity, and what it takes to own a small business. To him, work means learning how to be the best and most valuable individual you can be through the lessons and skills you learn from those working with you.

When he's not working, Tim loves going skiing in the winter, going to the beach in the summer, and trying new and unique foods. A fan of all Boston sports teams, Tim is a true New Englander currently living in Arlington, Virginia.
